Online PR News – 11-April-2011 bestwebdesignagencies.com, the independent authority on the best web designing companies, has named the best Flash Design Firms for April 2011. Each applicant was put through an extensive evaluation based upon an internally developed set of evaluation criteria. The independent review team that completed the analysis determined that these companies were the best when it came to Flash Design.

“Our evaluation criteria consists of core values that we find to be important for Flash Design Services that provide web strategy services for planning and constructing websites,” said Jeev Trika, Managing Partner of bestwebdesignagencies.com (<http://www.bestwebdesignagencies.com>).

The Top 10 Flash Design Companies for April 2011 are:

An experienced research team is assigned to evaluate each firm according to the set of internally developed ranking criteria. The first criterion focuses on project analysis, which reviews the process by which a vendor analyzes the focus of the business and the possibilities for designing a website specifically for that business. The team also reviews the vendor’s ability to identify types of software that would be beneficial for the client and different components and protocols of which to take advantage.

The next criterion focuses on customer involvement. bestwebdesignagencies.com evaluates firms based on how they involve the customer and the information that they gather in order to come up with an effective strategy for the development and design of a website.

The third criterion focuses on the effectiveness of the strategy that has been designed. Questions include “Does the strategy handle multiple aspects of the stages of development and design for the website?” and “Does it cover different boundaries and obstacles to launch?”

Our fourth criterion is on the quality of service being provided. The team evaluates a firm for how they handle their service with the customer and the quality of service being provided. This is done through both evaluating service processes and listening to what the customer thought about the service being provided.

The final criterion is on the strategy depth or how far into the project the firm has developed the strategy which involves the question, "Is the vendor able to look through an entire website project and make sure that it can be done?"
