Just as in any sport, you need practice and you need to have the proper equipment if you want to compete at your highest ability. Paintball obviously is no exception.

"The only way to the top is practice. The best players are incredibly talented, but they work hard to refine their talent. The only way to develop professional skills is to play professionally. Play so much as you can. Current pros have played hundreds, if not thousands, more games than you have. You have to work extra hard just to get up to par. Play every weekend, both days, and during the week if you can manage. Practice makes perfect.

- Alex Cadalso, Splat Magazine

Along with practice, the correct paintball marker package will be key to your success on the battlefield. Not all paintball markers are the same. You have pistols and machine guns, and paintball sniper rifles. You have automatic and semi automatic. You have pump action and electric. Choosing the right paintball marker package can be a difficult task to say the least, with so many options out there to choose from.
