Caffeine is Google's newest comprehensive search algorithm and infrastructure change. According to Irbtrax and many other sources Caffeine sightings have been firmly in place for several weeks now as evidenced by the following outside and inside the hood changes.

- New Google screen format with more options and an emphasis on real time search.
- Changes to SERP's including increased relevancy and a decreased number of indexes.
- Search Engine Results Pages that include live Twitter feeds and a greater emphasis on real time choices.

Irbtrax founder Scott Moir notes that "While it's apparent Caffeine has arrived it's also apparent that Google is still tweaking the screen. We've witnessed options appear and reappear, changes to the fonts being used and even different background colors for AdWord advertisements. This is SOP because Google is a tireless refiner."
