

Online Auto Insurance Advises Consumers to Shop Around for Cheap Rates

Consumers need to take the time to find the most affordable auto insurance coverage

Online PR News – 02-June-2010 The cost of automobile coverage can vary widely for many factors including the driver, automobile and geographical area; although many companies make a promise of being the cheapest insurer, it is up to the individual to shop around ensure that this would be the case.

The insurance companies spend a lot of money to try to secure new customers and while these advertisements may be eye catching and funny, a spokesman should not sway the decision of which company a motorist chooses. The most effective way to find the cheapest auto insurance is to shop around and compare the rates of the various insurers.

Prior to buying an automobile policy, consumers should keep the household names in mind when shopping around for affordable premiums; after all, they may be able to fulfill their promise, but it is also a good idea to compare some of the smaller names. Not all companies spend large amounts on advertisements and in turn may be able to pass those savings on to consumers; it may not be wise to overlook the smaller companies.

Quote comparisons can be done easily with numerous resources ranging from agents, insurer and comparison websites and even government websites such as Delaware.gov which provides sample rates based on various scenarios:
