DCI Warranty Services

Many consumers are unaware that adding the cost of the extended warranty to the auto loan is increasing the amount they are paying for the extended warranty and makes it very difficult to cancel if they chose to.

Online PR News – 14-August-2010 Consumers have overpaid for an extended warranty , also known as a vehicle service contract, when purchased from auto dealers that included it with the auto financing. Consumers consented out of convenience unaware they were paying interest for the extended warranty for the life of the auto loan.

DCI Warranty Services, a third party extended warranty company, offers interest-free financing and up to 60% off dealer pricing so consumers don't overpay for an extended warranty. Most car owners benefit from an extended warranty once their factory warranty has expired. An extended warranty can cover major auto parts the are expensive to repair so the car owner can avoid high repair bills. DCI Warranty Services can extend protection on vehicles up to 200,000 miles, which can provided peace of mind from major repairs for car owners.

Car owners seeking extended protection can contact DCI Warranty Services and receive an instant quote with coverage beginning as early as 30 days if the vehicle qualifies. Vehicle service contracts can be financed interest-free and can be cancelled at anytime with monies refunded for any unused portion of the agreement. Some car owners are convinced that an extended warranty is worth it. "I found such peace of mind from covering my first vehicle that I added a plan to my second vehicle," said Michelle F. from Mechanicsburg, VA who had a car break down 1800 miles away from home while her military husband was overseas. "I can't imagine what I would have done being so far from home and without the help of my husband when my van broke down. The extended warranty and DCI Warranty Services really came through."

Like medical insurance protects your family from financial catastrophe, an auto warranty protects you from the chaos that occurs when your car breaks down. And with interest-free financing it's affordable for more car owners.
